

Statement

Susan Kadis, M.P., Thornhill

Sunday, November 11, 2007

November 11th marks a very important day in this country. It is the day that we honour those Canadians who have served – and continue to serve – in the name of freedom, democracy and peace throughout the world.

In public ceremonies and in private thought, Canadians from coast to coast put aside their daily duties for a moment of silence in remembrance especially of those men and women whom we have lost in service to our country.

My thoughts and prayers are with all of Canada's War Veterans, the active members of our armed forces and their families – your courage is truly inspirational. We are blessed as Canadians because of the sacrifices you made. Let us always remember...